Here, hang on a snowy barn in Illinois. However, some scholars suggest that Francis Hopkinson, signatory of the Declaration of Independence and the who created the Great Seal of the United States, is responsible for the creation of the American flag.This postcard features an illustration based on Emanuel Leutze’s painting “Washington Crossing the Delaware”. The American flag occupies a prominent place in the painting, which has become one of the most popular images of the American Revolution.In this illustration, British troops withdraw after formally recognizing U.S. independence. When their service was required, the timers grabbed their arms and joined the scuffle immediately. This festive flag cake is guarded by a figure of TÃo Sam, who makes sure that no one slips any frosting before dessert. This confrontation between British and colonial forces took place in Charlestown, Massachusetts, on June 17, 1775.Since the colonies fought together for independence, it made sense for them to share a unified flag. Although many of the details here are blurred, American flags waving along the rooftops are easily detectable.During the Civil War, the American flag was supplanted by the Confederate flag in the south. A large American flag flies over the building, which is covered with tape and carries a sign that reads “The Nation Lourns”. Schoolchildren pledged allegiance to the flag in the 1950s. Here, the famous explorer Sir Walter Raleigh raises a flag in Virginia.Minutemen, like the one in this engraving from the late 1700s, pledged to serve the militia during the American Revolution. Here, he shows his manpower to George Washington and two congressmen.In this painting by Henry Mosler, Betsy Ross and her sewing circle put together the first American flag in Philadelphia. In this image, taken on April 24, 1971, a man lowering the American flag at a rally War in Washington, D.C. Far from home, the American flag provides military personnel with a sense of purpose, comfort, and duty.
